

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED FOR ROBERT WOOD JOHNSON FUNDED STUDY OF EMERGENCY DEPARTMENT PATIENTS

This Robert Wood Johnson Foundation grant funded research study is a joint collaboration between UNMC, Nebraska Medicine, and Legal Aid of Nebraska's Health Education and Law Project. Dr. Hongmei Wang, PhD, Assistant Professor in the Department of Health Services Research & Administration is leading research activities, and Ann Mangiameli, Managing Attorney at Legal Aid of Nebraska, is leading the provision of needs assessments and integrated services. The study is looking to assess and address the needs of emergency department patients and examine whether providing integrated services to address the unmet needs of these patients will help increase access to appropriate care, reduce costs, and improve health.

VOLUNTEER OPPORTUNITIES

- Attend the Volunteer Information and Training Workshop to develop the necessary skills and experience to carry out the study's research and needs assessment activities (lunch will be provided).
- Track participant's information using databases and software.
- Follow study protocol to obtain participant consent for participation.
- Administer phone surveys and screening questionnaires.
- Manage study data using online data management platform.
- Learn and adhere to proper research conduct for dealing with patients' sensitive information.

We are looking for several volunteers that are available during different days/times of the week. We are also in need of volunteers who speak Spanish.

If you would like more information about the volunteer position and/or gain skills and experience in surveying please join us at our Volunteer Information and Training Workshop on April 14th, 2018 from 12pm to 2pm.
